Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 13 Jul 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Showers at first but warmer settled weather expected from mid-week.

Today:
Cloudy with patchy light rain during the morning. Brightening up a little during the afternoon, with isolated showers developing, mainly over western hills. Some sunny spells for the evening inland but remaining cloudy near the coast. Maximum temperature 19 deg C (66 deg F).

Tonight:
Clear spells at first but cloud will soon return inland with most parts cloudy by midnight. Mainly dry apart from perhaps the odd spot of drizzle over the hills. Minimum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Wednesday:
After a cloudy start with some mist over the hills skies will brighten with some warm afternoon sunshine likely, as well as perhaps the odd shower. Maximum temperature 22 deg C (72 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Each day will probably start cloudy but brighten up during the morning with some lengthy sunny spells. Largely dry. Getting warmer each day away from the coast.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.